This was not onlt for the FBI. It was by the FBI, too.

Tyler said there was no spectrographic analysis of anything but the King clothin. This, of course, served no purpose without something with which to compare that analysis.

Attached to the Aoril 29, 1964 FBI lab report the test of which is propaganda rather than fact is a listing of the elements found in the death slug and several bullets with which it was compared. Its core It held an element the main bullet of comparison did not have, enough to raise doubts if not more. Eight chemincal components are listed. But not a single measurement with regard to any. Or, half a spectroscpy was safer than one full one.

Seven elements were identified in the jack. Not one figure or measurement or proportion, the entire purpose of the tests.

And where their are figures, for antimony, the differences are considerable.
